Cooper Hurley Client Hit by a Truck Awarded $1.15 Million

John Cooper

Jim Hurley

A 60-year-old mother and grandmother was outside her car dealing with a flat tire when she was hit by a commercial truck in Hampton Roads.

She was standing outside her minivan when she sustained serious injuries, including fractures of her left leg, a broken bone in her neck, and a broken nose. CT testing at the hospital emergency room also showed bleeding on the brain indicative of a traumatic brain injury.

The injuries left our client facing a long stay at Sentara Norfolk General Hospital and then at a rehabilitation facility. Her medical bills exceeded $100,000.

The woman hired Cooper Hurley Injury Lawyers after the accident. The extent of a brain injury proved to be important to the case. Traumatic brain injuries (TBIs) are a challenge because the person may appear outwardly to be fine, although their head injury persists. Lawyers for the commercial insurance company covering the tanker truck disputed the traumatic brain injury as a permanent impairment.

Attorneys John Cooper and Jim Hurley pointed out the serious impact the traumatic brain injury had on the woman's life. She was no longer able to return to her job as the foreman of a warehouse, losing employment worth $25,000 a year. The traffic accident and injuries forced her to go on social security.

Photographs of the woman's bloody and swollen face in the emergency room proved to be important evidence in the case.

Attorneys for the at-fault company claimed our client was partially responsible for her injuries. Contributory negligence is a total bar to recovering in Virginia personal injury lawsuits. The defense lawyers claimed the woman was in the wrong for changing a flat tire partly in the right lane of a highway at the time that she was hit, rather than pulling off the road. There was no useable shoulder. What was reasonable under the circumstances would have had to be decided by a jury.

The insurance company and lawyer also claimed our client was at fault because her vehicle was not in a good condition. However, anyone can have a breakdown, and our client did what she thought was right after the emergency happened including turning on her flashers during the attempted tire change. The hazard lights should have been seen by a professional driver. Our firm found a key independent witness who was able to safely pass by before the crash occurred.

Attorneys John Cooper and Jim Hurley highlighted factors that led to the failure of the trucker to see the woman by the roadside. The trucker had a history of untreated insomnia. Fatigue is a massive issue in the trucking industry and our attorneys have previously drawn attention to serious problems like chronic sleep apnea among truckers.

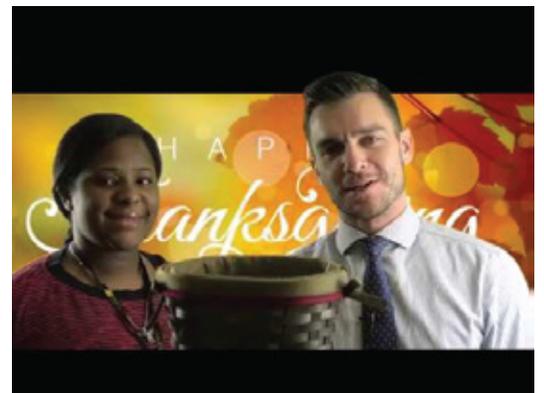

As well as facing lost wages and high medical bills, the grandmother faced high potential future medical costs including in-home care for her traumatic brain injury symptoms. A life care plan was developed by our lawyers and experts to know what her future health costs might be from the wreck.

The case was settled for $1,150,000 at a lengthy mediation between the parties. See our website for more details about recent case results.

Were You Harmed by an IVC Filter?

More than 5,800 people have filed lawsuits against the manufacturers of IVC Filters. Inferior Vena Cava Filters are medical devices that are inserted into the vena cava vein to protect patients against blood clots and other complications.

In recent years, increasing numbers of patients claim IVC Filters migrated and caused potentially deadly complications. See our infographic for more information.

IVC filters are Inferior Vena Cava Filters. They are placed in the largest vein of the human body, the vena cava. They are used to prevent blood clots from breaking off and migrating to vital organs like the brain, the heart, and the lungs where the clots can be deadly to patients. IVC Filters have fragmented and migrated, causing serious health problems and even deaths.

IVC DEADLY SIDE EFFECTS

IVC filters are known to fragment and migrate to other parts of the human body.

Legs and struts from the filters have blocked blood vessels and vascular channels.

Infections are reported in the devices.

Blood clots have formed in the legs of patients because the IVC filters have migrated.

The filters have perforated vital organs such as the heart and lungs.

In some cases, IVC filter fragmentation is linked to death.

Cooper Hurley Injury Lawyers Holds First Holiday Party

Cooper Hurley Injury Lawyers held its first annual holiday party at the Town Point Club in Norfolk on Dec. 8. Thanks to Griff and Candace for organizing it. The event was so successful, we're already talking about next year's.

Trivia

Forget too much turkey. Hundreds of years ago the month of December was associated with the fear of starvation.

Death was common as winter set in between January and April. The midwinter festival that later became Christmas was the last feast before the cold set in. Most cattle were slaughtered so they would not have to be fed during the winter. It was just about the only time of year when a supply of fresh meat was available.

December was also a time when wine and beer was fermented and became ready for drinking.

Christmas in Portsmouth

Quote

“There must be something ghostly in the air of Christmas — something about the close, muggy atmosphere that draws up the ghosts, like the dampness of the summer rains brings out the frogs and snails.” "Jerome K. Jerome"

Joke

Q: Who is Santa's favorite singer?

A: Elf-is Presley.
